

Since XM Radio is a service independently chosen and paid for by a consumer, there should be no Government attempts to limit its content. XM and other satellite radio services are an excellent alternative to traditional radio outlets and the FCC should not interfere with the content satellite services provide in any manner, including broadcast of "locally oriented material". In fact, I would like to see more "locally oriented" material on Satellite radio. I oppose HR 4026.